

We asked members of Women at LeChase

What is some of the best advice you received about working in construction?

Here are their responses:

ERIKA CONRADT

Project Manager | New York Metro

"Be patient and be eager to learn and try new things every chance you get."

NADINE LETOURNEAU

Project Engineer | Southeast

"You don't have to know everything; you just have to be willing to learn."

PATRICIA LYSYCZYN

Senior Risk Management Specialist | Rochester

"It is an industry that you are always learning and every project is different."

CHEYENNE SMITH

Project Administrator | Southeast

"There are so many facets to this industry, and the best advice I've been given is to soak up as much knowledge and information about every piece of the puzzle that I can."

JACKIE MCCLURE

Assistant Project Manager | New Jersey

"Always do the right thing and treat everyone with respect because you never know when you may cross paths with the person again, and what role they may play in your future."

KATHRYN PAYNE

Project Executive | Southeast

"Speak up when you don't understand something. You're only hurting yourself by not asking questions."

Celebrating Women in Construction Week 2023

Thank you to all the women at LeChase
for their contributions to our industry.
